Dear Ms. Sara and Ms. Betsy,

I want to thank you again for sharing the results of the BrainWare Safari study with me recently. It was exciting to hear about the progress all the children in my class made last year as measured by the Woodcock Johnson test. I could also see progress in their behavior and their ability to learn.

While the students in my class all had significant behavior problems, I can honestly say that there were no behavior problems during the time they were using BrainWare. They were engaged and focused and everyone was learning. When one of them would get stuck or need help, they helped each other, more than they did with any other activity during the school day. Participation in BrainWare was definitely one of the factors that helped them improve their behavior.

BrainWare Safari helped my students' whole way of thinking – from working independently to paying attention and following directions, as well as critical thinking. I don't know of any other program that can produce the kinds of growth that my students experienced as a result of using BrainWare Safari.

Not only did my students make progress, they really enjoyed the program. In fact, they would beg, "Can we do BrainWare? Can we do BrainWare?"

I hope very much that my class will be able to use the program again this year.

Sincerely,

Natalie Cordell
